

Be Trauma-Informed.

Don't expect emotionally-injured kids to react "normally" when stressed.

Trauma-exposed kids' misbehavior is often only a symptom of the problem. Learn to recognize kids' triggers and crisis patterns, then respond proactively. Provide stability to counteract anxiety, and reassurance to combat fear. Offer choices rather than forcing compliance.