

Be courageously patient.

Don't lash back. Take a breath and wait them out.

When children are drowning in emotional turmoil, they often lash out at those who dive in to rescue them. Though it takes enormous patience, resist the instinct to lash back. Respond with understanding and wait them out instead.